FDA and Abortion

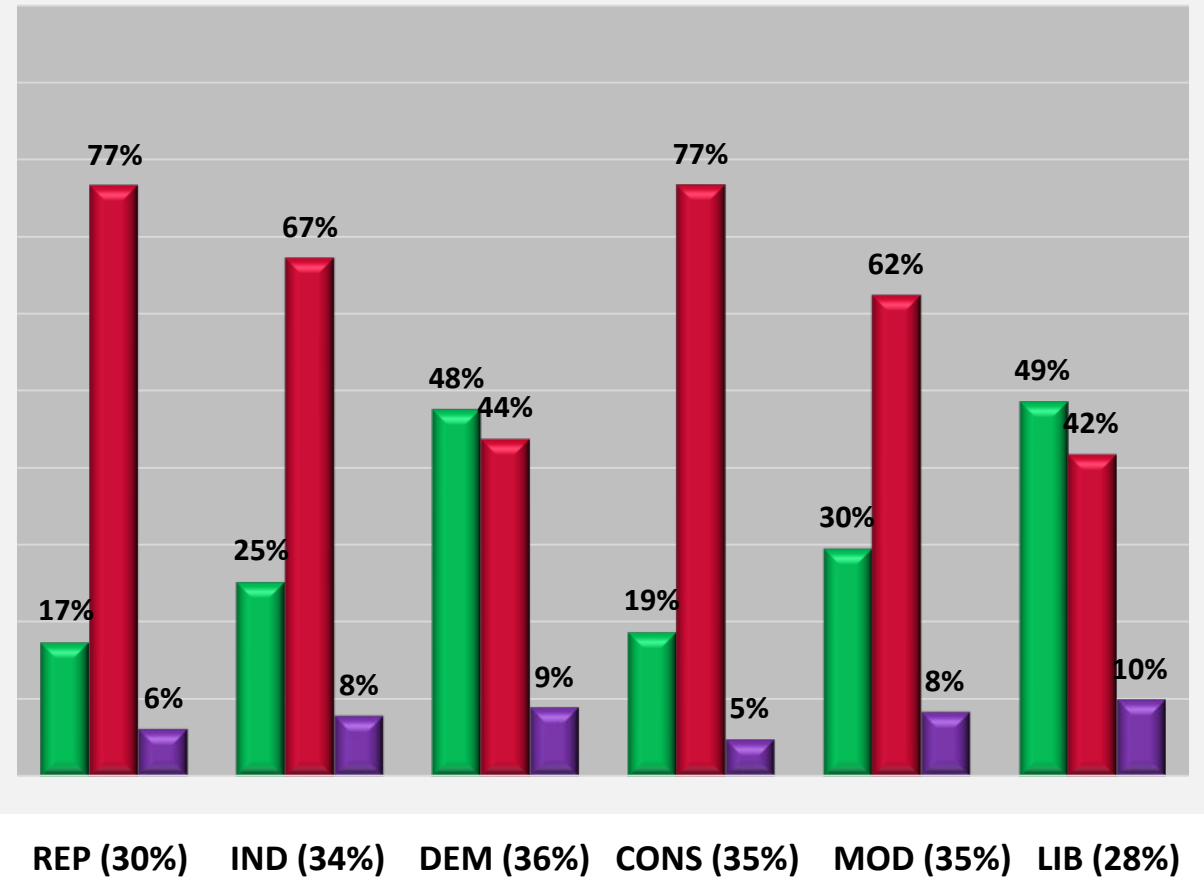

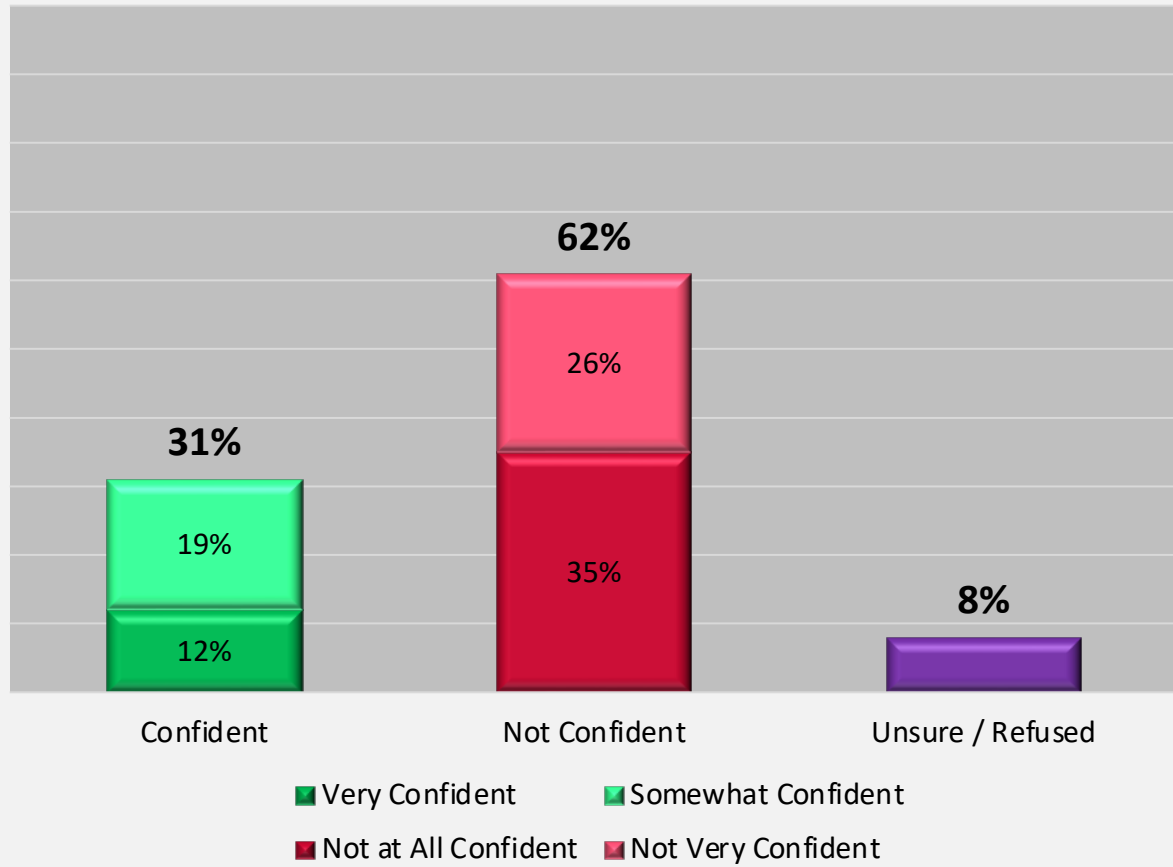

The abortion pill is approved for use on young girls, even though the FDA ignored its own rules by performing no studies focused on girls under the age of 18. Do you agree or disagree that the FDA should have performed studies before approving the drug for girls under 18?

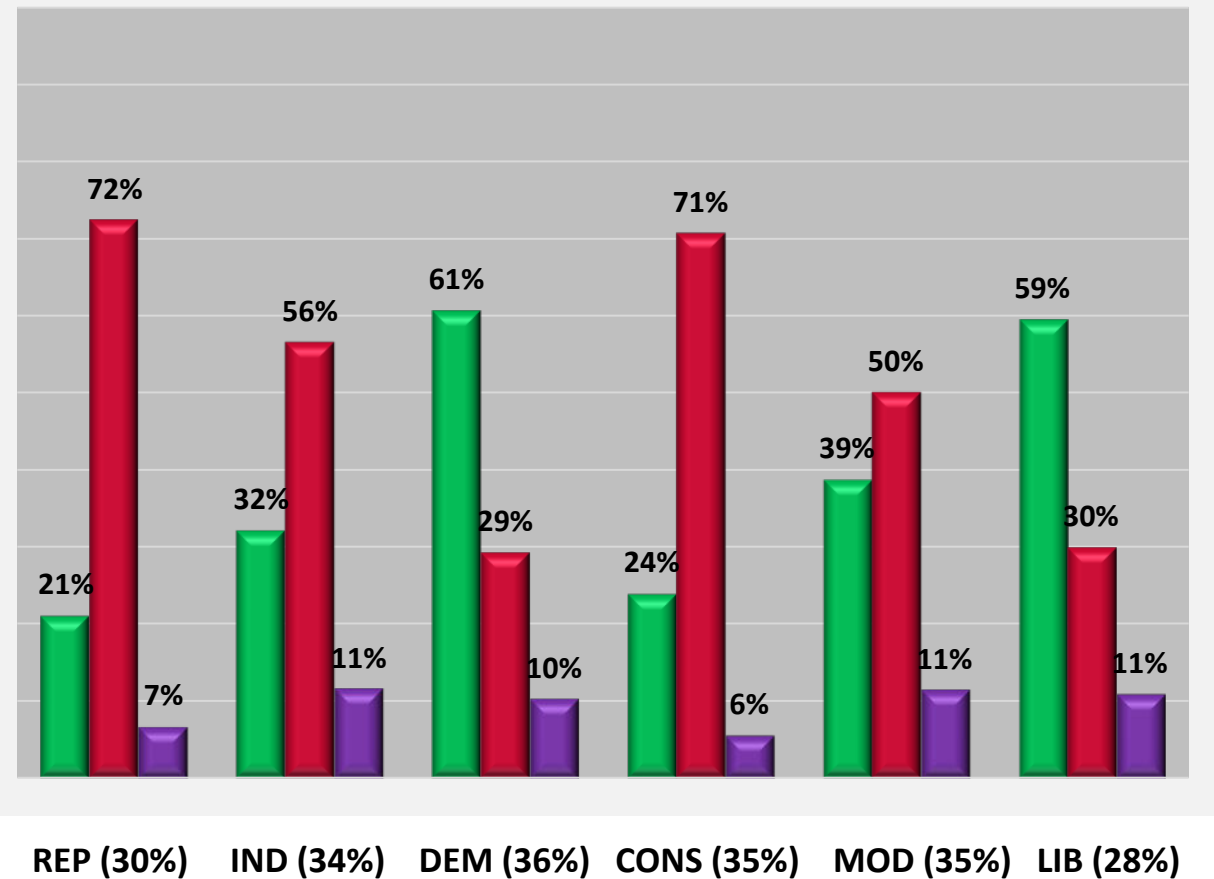

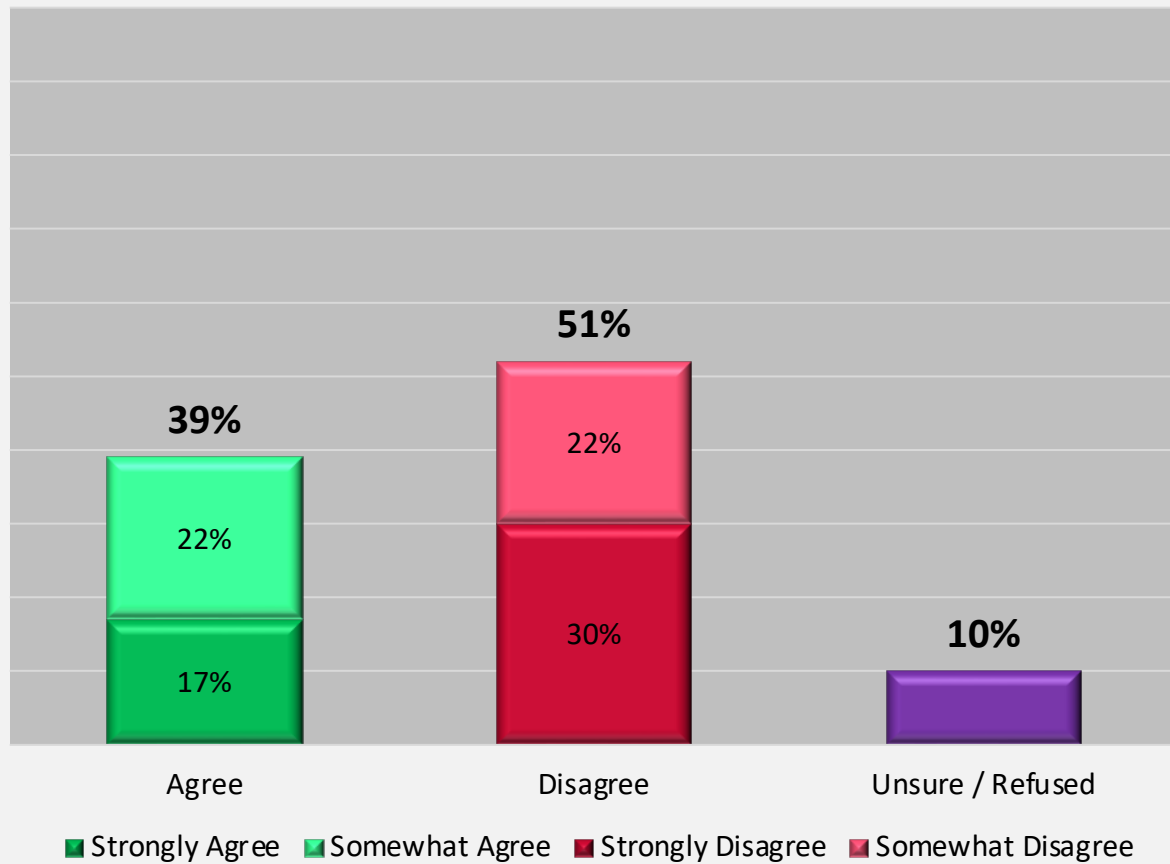

If you knew that the FDA fast-tracked the abortion pill regimen using its accelerated drug approval authority by calling pregnancy a “life-threatening illness”, would you consider the FDA trustworthy or untrustworthy?

If you knew that the FDA only tracked deaths, but no other side effects from abortion drugs, would you feel confident or not confident in the claim that the drug is safe based on the fact it has been on the market for two decades?

Based on what you know about the FDA, do you agree or disagree that the abortion drug has been vetted carefully enough to protect the health and safety of women?

Studies have shown that distribution of the abortion pill regimen via the mail or telemedicine puts women at increased risk of coercion and abuse because there is no way to document that the woman making the request is the person who will receive the abortion or to document that she is even pregnant. Do you agree or disagree that it is safe for abortion drugs to be distributed through the mail with little to no supervision?
